Darstellung des neuen Standards IFRS 15 "Umsatzerlöse aus Verträgen mit Kunden" und dessen Auswirkungen auf die Automobilzulieferindustrie Jun 26 2019 Masterarbeit aus dem Jahr 2015 im Fachbereich BWL - Rechnungswesen, Bilanzierung, Steuern, Note: 1,3, Hochschule für Wirtschaft und Umwelt Nürtingen-Geislingen; Standort Nürtingen, Veranstaltung: Accounting, Auditing & Taxation, Sprache: Deutsch, Abstract: Nach einer jahrelangen Diskussions- und Entwicklungsphase hat das International Accounting Standards Board (IASB) im Mai 2014 den neuen Standard zur Umsatzrealisierung aus Kundenverträgen, IFRS 15 Revenue from Contracts with Customers, veröffentlicht. Dieser ist das Resultat des bereits seit dem Jahr 2002 auf der Agenda stehenden Konvergenzprojekts Revenue Recognition" mit dem US-amerikanischen Financial Accounting Standards Board (FASB). IFRS 15 ersetzt eine ganze Reihe von alten Standards und Interpretationen. Entsprechend weit ist der Anwendungsbereich dabei gefasst. Die derzeit bestehende Unterscheidung zwischen dem Verkauf von Gütern bzw. der Erbringung von Dienstleistungen einerseits (IAS 18) und langfristigen Fertigungsaufträgen (IAS 11) andererseits wird aufgehoben. Stattdessen schreibt der neue Standard ein allgemeingültiges Ertragsvereinnahmungskonzept für Kundenverträge vor, das auf alle Transaktionen und Branchen anwendbar ist. Durch IFRS 15 werden Inkonsistenzen und Schwachstellen in den derzeit gültigen Regelungen behoben, die Regelungslücke bezüglich Mehrkomponentenverträgen geschlossen und die Vergleichbarkeit sowohl unternehmens- und branchenweit als auch kapitalmarktübergreifend verbessert. Die erstmalige Anwendung ist sowohl nach IFRS als auch nach US-GAAP für Berichtsperioden vorgesehen, die am oder nach dem 01.01.2017 beginnen. Die Anwenderpraxis ist daher bereits jetzt gefordert, die Neuregelungen umzusetzen bzw. die Auswirkungen auf die Jahresabschlüsse richtig zu interpretieren. Während sich die Änderungen für einfache Verkaufstransaktionen auf ein Minimum beschränken, können sich bei Unternehmen mit komplexen Vertragskonstruktionen (Mehrkomenentenverträge) erhebliche Veränderungen bezogen

Reporting Non-GAAP Financial Measures Dec 25 2021 The use of alternative performance indicators (APMs) (also known as ' Non-GAAP ' earnings) is a widespread phenomenon, and the increased reliance on APMs has recently triggered a strong debate among regulators, managers and investors on the nature of these ' tailored ' earnings and on the economic reasons behind them. On one hand, APMs might reflect managers ' attempt to offer useful information to predict companies ' future sustainable cash-flows and earnings (information hypothesis), while, on the other, the non-standardized nature of these metrics impacts on the comparability of the financial results, and reduces the reliability and the faithful representation of financial information (opportunistic hypothesis). By collecting several theoretical and empirical contributions on APMs, this book provides a number of interesting and useful insights on the economics of APMs and their impact on financial markets.

Financial Reporting on Earnings Management Feb 01 2020 Essay from the year 2017 in the subject Business economics - Accounting and Taxes, grade: A, University of Nairobi, language: English, abstract: This paper discusses the motives behind earnings management and explains some of the methods used by firms to manage their earnings. Earnings management has been defined differently by a number of scholars. It is important to note that there is a thin line between fraud and earnings management. Hamid, Hashim and Salleh citing the works of Brown, Perols and Lounge and Erickson, Hanlon and Maydew noted the difference in the definitions that are offered by the scholars. According to Perols and Lounge organizations will engage in fraud due to the constraints on earnings management. The research found out that the firms that had engaged in earnings management will be more likely to be involved in cases of fraud. Brown and Erickson et al noted that the difference between earnings management and fraud is that earnings management is usually within the scope of the generally accepted accounting principles (GAAP) while fraud is outside of the boundaries of GAAP. Earnings management has been defined as the manipulation of the financial statements and reports by the managers so that the firms can earn extra profit. It has also been defined as the action where the management of the organizations apply their own self-assessment in the communication of the financial information and transactions to modify the financial data for two main reasons: 1) influencing contractual businesses that solely rely on the financial information or 2) providing the stakeholders with a wrong impression about the financial position of the firm.

THE IMPACT OF ADJUSTED EARNINGS PRACTICES ON FIRM PERFORMANCE Apr 04 2020 "Show me the incentive and I will show you the outcome". Charlie Munger The use of adjusted earnings as a presentation alternative to GAAP earnings is intended to help financial statement users understand the underlying performance of a company. The approach is highly prevalent and growing in frequency and adjustment magnitude, as "by 2017, for example the average adjustment per firm was 26 cents per share or about 15% of average GAAP earnings per share" (Rouen, So, and Wang, 2020, p. 3). While some adjustments are standard adjustments for non-recurring items like accounting rule changes, or part of a set of consistently communicated recurring items, there is another group of adjustments that are infrequent, subject to considerable management latitude and often inconsistently categorized. Across the range of academic research on this phenomenon, there are questions regarding management motivation, communication clarity and persistence of these non-GAAP adjustments. There is a broader question regarding business decision rigor, and quality of earnings versus peers for those firms with a large adjusted to reported earnings difference. In Chapter 3, I assess the consequences of the use of Adjusted Earnings, by testing whether the size of the difference between reported and adjusted earnings is associated with a difference in performance against a set of key firm performance measures. The underlying hypothesis is that firms with a large adjusted-earnings differential have weaker underlying operational performance, compared to their peers and that ultimately the decisions and adjustment actions being taken (e.g., more acquisitions, business reorganizations or "one-offs") that drive up the earnings adjustment subsequently erode performance. The study of a set of large New York Stock Exchange (NYSE) listed companies over a ten-year period (2011 through 2020) showed that firms with large adjusted-earnings differentials had statistically significant performance gaps versus peers that had smaller earnings adjustments on return on assets (ROA) and return on equity (ROE), both contemporaneously and prospectively. There were also performance differences in current year total shareholder return (TSR), although that was mostly a short-term phenomenon and did not hold for future TSR. The study results were particularly significant for the operational measure return on assets (ROA). The tests controlled for firm sector, size and leverage ratio. In Chapter 4, I examine whether CEO incentive compensation (total current year variable pay, variable pay as a percentage/fraction of total compensation, and unvested equity) is a possible cause of the expanded use of Adjusted Earnings practices, and associated with the size of the difference between adjusted and reported earnings. The hypothesis for this follow-on study was that CEO incentives are enhanced by a higher adjusted earnings number, given the typical structure of incentive plans and thus they could influence higher adjusted-earnings differentials. The literature is mixed on this topic as some studies like Black, Black, Christensen and Gee (2021) show no significant relationship between CEO pay and aggressive non-GAAP earnings reporting, while others show that large positive non-GAAP earnings adjustments predict abnormally high CEO Pay (Guest, Kothari and Pozen, 2017). Cohen, Dey and Lys (2008) found that unexercised options were positively associated with income-increasing accrual-based earnings management activities, but that activity is not necessarily impacting reported performance measures (p. i). This second study, found only partial statistical support for the hypothesis that current year variable compensation was associated with the Adjusted Earnings differential, but it was inconclusive. There was statistical significance for the tests of the variable compensation ratio and total unvested equity being related to future adjusted earnings differentials, but those findings were at a relatively low significance level.
